15/9/2017 · You can read my full disclosure here. We normally only buy kit Legos, so I ordered a bunch of 1×1 bricks to build these portraits. If you have a large supply of Legos at your house, you may have all you need already to build these Star Wars Lego mosaics. To get started all you need are similar colored Legos and a large baseplate like one of these:

As with all of our LEGO® mosaics, kids can modify the designs with the bricks they have. The backgrounds certainly don't need to be the same color as what we have pictured, but kids can also modify the designs any way they like. They are just designed to provide some building inspiration! We have more than just Star Wars LEGO® mosaics to print!

This one uses LEGO Duplo, but you could use any bricks to create the same idea – all you need is a sheet of A4 paper and a flashlight, then let your imagination run wild! Image: The Maven
While this doesn't take any building, The Maven created a fun way to play tic tac toe with LEGO – which would be perfect for car journeys or travelling.

When assembling the various gears, it's important to make sure everything rotates freely. That is, don't push the gears onto the axles too tightly, otherwise there will be a lot of friction between the gears and the Technic liftarms beside them. This is especially important when connecting the earth.

Microbuilds draw me in. Every time. Small builds packed with details are just amazing. They also feed my penchant for the LEGO Architecture theme. If you are a regular reader, I'm sure you already know that. And sharing this Winter Wonderland – Winter Village Architecture build will come as no surprise! Description of the Winter
