10/4/2012 · Imagine what happens when an education, a water and a malaria organization enter a developing country together to address the three most relevant and essential problems facing the well being and development of a community. The final result of such a project would yield results that are greater than the sum of its parts.

Most of us had heard of DAI, though many of us didn't know the organization well. They're a much larger development firm, recognized for finding new and bigger ways to serve humanity. As we got to know our DAI colleagues better, we were thrilled to recognize their complementary vision, values, technical capabilities, geography, and talents.
