Falling Leaves Chapters 5-8 Summary & Analysis Chapter 5 Summary: “Yi Chang Chun Meng (An Episode of a Spring Dream)” As the oldest child, Lydia flaunts her authority over Adeline (though she hints that part of Lydia’s authoritative behavior may be overcompensation for her visible deformity, as she has a semi-paralyzed left arm).

Adeline Yen Mah's memoir is interesting from several vantage points: spanning her childhood in china, young adulthood in England and the remainder of her life in California, her story is one that lends great context to the pre-world war 2 china and it's transition to communism following the revolution.

When Joseph Yen Tse-Rung remarries, his new wife decides to change the names of the children he brought into the marriage and so Jun-Ling becomes Adeline. The remarriage was a direct result of the intense grief experienced by her father after losing his wife.
