A family is a group of two or more people who are related by blood, marriage, adoption, or a mutual commitment and who care for one another. Defined in this way, the family is universal or nearly universal: some form of the family has existed in every society, or nearly every society, that we know about (Starbuck, 2010).

The old Chinese families tried to have as many children as possible and caused a big increase on China's population. In 1970s, the Chinese Communist Party started a campaign to encourage Chinese family to practice family planning and one child policy and caused the families in China to be smaller. However, this policy had led to some problems in Chinese society like gender imbalance, rapidly aging ...
