24/1/2019 · ‘The swan belongs to Siddhartha,’ he said. ‘Siddhartha has saved its life, and cared for it and made it well. Devadatta has hurt it and seek to destroy it. Nobody can own a living being, except the one who loves it. So the swan remains with Siddhartha.’ Devadatta was furious. But Siddhartha only smiled. He had saved the swan.

31/5/2018 · When Devadatta persisted, Siddhartha suggested that they bring the matter to the king, and so in front of the whole court Devadatta and Siddhartha each presented their side of the argument. They were both so persuasive that the court was divided; some people thought the swan belonged to Devadatta because he shot it, while others believed that it was Siddhartha's for nursing it.
